Biographical Information

Rodney K. delasanta graduated from Providence College, summa cum laude, in 1953 and from Brown University, Ph'D and Phi Beta Kappa, in 1961. He returned to Providence College in 1961 and spent the next forty-six years there, fulfilling the archtype of the scholar-teacher. For seventeen of those years he was also Director of the Liberal Arts Honors Program.

As a nationally acclaimed Chaucer scholar who published more than 40 scholarly articles and authored The Epic Voice, Delasanta is remembered as an outstanding scholar who cared deeply for his students and made a lasting influence on the college. "He was a Renaissance man. That says it all," said Dr. Donna McCaffrey, assistant professor of history. "Everything he did, he did well." To many faculty members, Delasanta was the embodiment of what the College should be.

"He represented everything I admire about Providence College: intellectual pursuits blended with humanity and spirituality," said Dr. Joseph Carroll, adjunct assistant professor of English. "His brilliant mind was surpassed only by his genuine warmth, humor, compassion, and deep faith."

As a member of one of the first graduating classes of the Liberal Arts Honors Program in 1953, Delasanta was part of a group that was "in some ways groomed to be the first lay faculty of the College," said Dr. Bruce Graver, chair of the department of English. Earning his master's degree in 1955 and his doctorate in 1962 from Brown University, Delasanta joined the PC faculty as an assistant professor of English in 1961. He would eventually chair the department of English and the honors program, and serve as assistant director of the study abroad program. In addition, he held visiting professorships at Brown University and the University of Fribourg, Switzerland.

During his tenure at Providence College, Delasanta was the recipient of the President's Distinguished Faculty Award and the Sears Roebuck Award for Excellence in Teaching. He also chaired the Rhodes Scholarship Nominating Committee for Rhode Island.

As head of the honors program, Delasanta played a large role in recruiting top students to Providence College. As the son of an immigrant weaver from Woonsocket, R.I., he maintained the first-generation connection with students and drew in legacy students. "His ability to recruit students as a faculty member was unmatched and will be extremely hard to replace," said Dr. Stephen Lynch, professor of English and then director of the liberal arts honors program.

"He was an inspiration for both students and faculty alike. He had a way of delivering a lecture that was clear, learned, informative, and impressive in the old fashioned lecture style," said Graver.

"He looked the part, he acted the part, he had the resume for the part, he played the part. Probably because he actually wasn't playing."

"Even for newer, younger faculty, Dr. Delasanta was a warm, inviting senior faculty member," recalled Dr. Matthew Dowling, assistant professor and chair of the department of history. "He was greatly admired for his teaching and scholarship." "It's a great loss for the college. He was one of the great teachers and academic leaders for 40 years," said Dr. Mario DiNunzio, professor of history. For DiNunzio, however, Delasanta's passing was more than the loss of a colleague.

"We literally grew up in the same neighborhood. We'd known each other personally and professionally all our lives," he said. He was known for his generosity - he was open and giving to everyone he met," he said.

Delasanta's attitude toward life was echoed in his approach in the classroom. In describing his own philosophy of teaching, Delasanta quoted directly from Chaucer's Canterbury Tales: "Gladly would he learn and gladly teach."

Students recall lectures in which Delasanta would stop to exclaim, in awe, about the beauty of a piece of work. But he was certainly not limited by the repertoire of traditional classes. In one Development of Western Civilization (DWC) music lecture last year, he brought in his keyboard and led the class in a raucous rendition of "Doe-a-Deer."

"He was always really excited about anything he was teaching. He really got into it. If it was something you could have an opinion on, he had a hard time not showing his opinion, but in a good way . . . it would prompt debate. He was very feisty!" said Katie Mattaini '08. He is described as a man who truly cared for his students, both inside and outside the classroom.

"Dr. Delasanta was not only a spectacular professor who could make any subject interesting and even the most impossible concepts easy to understand, but his enthusiasm and caring transcended the classroom into all aspects of the student's life," said Kenney. His love for his students extended beyond the classroom. With fellow DWC professors, he hosted monthly Slavin Center lunches for his students.

According to his fellow professors, Delasanta's enthusiasm for life went beyond the boundaries of the Providence College campus. "God wants you to be fully alive,' his example seemed to say," said Dr. Robert Reeder, assistant professor of English. "It's become cliché, but he was one of the most passionate teachers I've ever known," said Dr. Charles Duffy, professor of English. "He was so completely involved, not just in his teaching, but in whatever he did here. He was a great inspiration to people. . . you felt so alive around him."

Even before his death, Delasanta's legacy at Providence College was solidified. In early February of 2007, Lynch announced that the annual honors program lecture would be called the "Delasanta Lecture." Delasanta was able to attend the Feb. 8 event where he was officially honored by College President Rev. Brian Shanley, O.P.

"Dr. Rodney Delasanta leaves a legacy of inspiration," said Dr. Jane Lunin-Perel, professor of English and director of the Women's Studies Department. "He has encouraged and brought to life the literary imagination, love of scholarship, and spiritual awakening of countless students, faculty, and administrators. Staff members have also appreciated his humor, humility, and compassion. When Rodney laughed, the world turned hilarious; when his mood was serious, it was time for all who knew him to experience deep reflection." Delasanta passed in 2007 in his Woonsocket home, which he built with his own hands. He is survived by his wife and four children.
